Burglars Take 178 Watches from Jewelry Store Here

MANAGER PUTS LOSS AT $5,000 IN NIGHT RAID

South Main St. Store Looted Late Saturday or Early Sunday.

A break-in at the Lords Jewelry store at 114 South Main street resulted in a total of 178 watches valued at more than $5,000 being taken Saturday night or early Sunday morning, according to the manager, said.

Chief of Police William E. Marks said this morning that the break-in was reported to police at 10:30 Sunday morning by Lowell Hamburg, son of the proprietor who found the front door to the store closed but unlocked.

Chief Marks said the door had been tried twice and found locked at 10:30 and 11:30. A merchant policeman found the door locked at 9:30 and later at 10:30 a city policeman also found it locked.

Some Missed

When Lowell Hamburg found the front door unlocked he entered the store to find three show-cases containing wrist watches had been ransacked. All but about a half-dozen watches had been tipped from their cases. Manager Hamburg said today that apparently it was dark in the front part of the store and the burglars were unable to see the remaining watches.

A later check by police and store officials revealed that a cashbox had been taken and apparently used to carry the stolen watches.

Following the discovery of the ransacked cases, Lowell Hamburg summoned City Patrolman McClellan, who in turn notified headquarters while Hamburg called his father from their home at 413 Mt. Vernon avenue.

Tamper With Lock

Homer Hull, a Marion locksmith, was summoned by Mr. Hamburg to repair the jammed door.

When Mr. Hull arrived he asked by Mr. Hamburg how he came to the store had been tampered with.

After checking the lock, Chief Mr. Hull told police that the door was a screw-down type and that a screw had been removed during the burglary.

Chief said this was the method of entrance was gained.

Manager Hamburg said employees of the store had noticed the door was ajar but did not suspect it was tampered with.

One of the two men waiting a watch repaired by Steffen, a jeweler employed by the firm. While the one man was having a watch repaired, the second man stood near the door. It was at this time the door was opened and the store officials were alerted.

Manager Hamburg said he attempted to catch the man, but he turned and ran. He was a friend to have been seen.

When having the watch repaired, the man was described by store officials as being about five feet, eight inches tall, between 30-35 years of age, a brown suit and a dark tie.

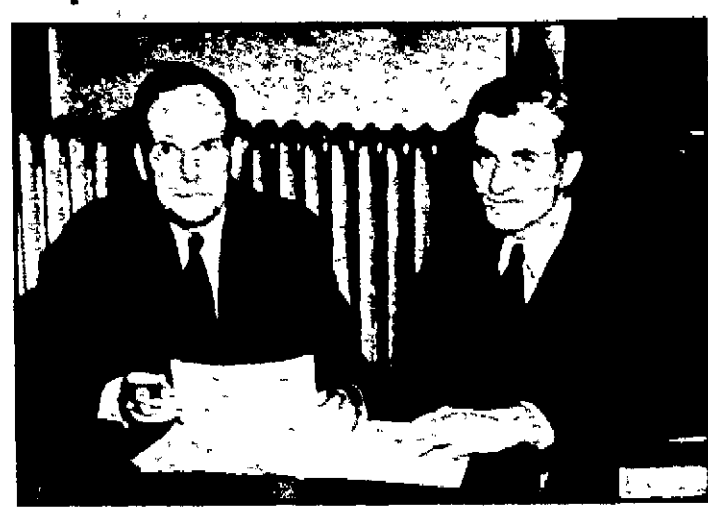

He was of foreign birth, descriptions were also given of the second man. How Hamburg said he believed the man was wearing a blue suit.

Manager Hamburg said today that the third attempt to gain admittance was during the night.

Other occasions, signs of force upon a skylight of the two-story building were discovered. He said the second attempt had been made by the second man.

After the second attempt, fasteners were placed on the window.

TWO HURT IN AUTO MISHAPS

Accidents Reported Near City; 21 Killed in Ohio Week-End.

End Accidents.

Two persons were injured in automobile accidents near Marion over the week-end. Five minor traffic mishaps were reported in the city in the same period.

In Ohio The Associated Press reported 21 were killed in week-end traffic accidents.

Two Injured In Five Accidents

Five, single-vehicle accidents, three of which involved tractor and semi-trailer trucks, occurred near Marion over the week-end. Two persons were injured.

Marion state highway patrolmen reported a car driven by Fred Evans, 26, of 259 South Prospect street turned over three times after skidding out of control on county road No. 136 southwest of Marion early yesterday morning.

Patrolman said Evans lost control of his car while attempting to avoid a collision with another car. They reported he suffered several body injuries but was not taken to City hospital.

The three semi-trailer truck accidents all occurred Saturday. The first happened on Route 61 near Mt. Gilead about 4 a. m., a patrolman said, when a truck driven by William Basham, 22, of near Sunbury, ran off the road and struck a telephone pole. Slight damage to the truck was reported.

A truck driven by Arthur Loos, 47, of Coshocton ran off the road.

CARMIE A. THOMPSON DIES IN CLEVELAND

Ohioan Held Many State and National Public Offices.

CLEVELAND, June 22—Carmie A. Thompson, 71, treasurer of the United States under President Taft, died today at his home after a long illness.

The Cleveland attorney, long influential in Republican politics and one-time candidate for governor of Ohio, died at 1:15 p. m. of an ailment that kept him under physicians' care for the past three months.

Mr. Thompson held several public offices, first as city solicitor of Ironton, O., then as law service was as chairman of the state legislature, and two terms as secretary of state of Ohio.

From state politics he became prominent in national affairs, first as assistant secretary of the interior of the U. S. and secretary to President Taft who later appointed him treasurer of the United States.

He was a veteran of the Spanish American war. Just before the outcome of the war he was made captain of the Ironton National Guard company, later was promoted to major and then to colonel.

In the second term of his services in the state legislature, he served as speaker of the house and of his last position of public service was as chairman of the commission that supervised construction of the state office building in Columbus.

Operators of Ordnance Works Have Two Top Ranking Executives Here.

Activities of the U. S. Rubber Co., under contract with the war department to operate the Scioto Ordnance Plant, are headed in Marion by the two executives pictured above.

At present, Mr. Livermore, as resident engineer, is kept busy representing his company's interests in the construction of the plant. Mr. Brown as general manager likewise is interested in current developments, but is more concerned with the later operation of the plant.

Mr. Livermore is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, served on the engineering staff for construction of the New York City subway tunnels in New York City, worked on plant expansion work in the first World War, served as construction engineer in Rancagua, Chile, and for many years served as resident engineer in charge of big-scale construction projects throughout the country. He has been with U. S. Rubber since 1940. He served as resident engineer in charge of the company's interests at the Des Moines Ordnance Plant before coming here. He and Mrs. Livermore are parents of two children.

Mr. Brown brings to the Scioto Ordnance Plant a background of 12½ years with the U. S. Rubber Co. His last position was that of production manager for four of its large divisions, mechanical goods, general products, latex yarn and out thread divisions, embracing factories operating in Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey.

Mr. Brown is a graduate of Yale in mechanical engineering and was a member of the first class of the ordnance engineering training school at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland in 1918. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the ordnance department and served as proof officer until January of 1919. He attended Harvard graduate school of administration.

His experience of more than 25 years in industry includes positions as plant engineer, standards engineer, chief engineer, and since September of 1929 he has been with the U. S. Rubber Co. as engineer, factory manager and more recently as production manager for five of the company's plants. He will continue to spend part of his time in his New York office when he takes over his duties as general manager of the Scioto Ordnance Plant.

REDS FORCED TO DROP BACK AT SEVASTOPOL

Nazis Push Forward Despite Losses of 100,000 in Few Weeks.

MOSCOW, June 22—Sevastopol defenders dropped back from the north and south fortresses guarding the Crimean naval base today before enormous German pressure, exerted ceaselessly despite the heavy casualties, estimated at 100,000 which Axis forces have suffered in less than three weeks.

A fresh Nazi wedge was forced in the fortifications to the north where the enemy massed a huge force of infantry, artillery and tanks, press accounts said.

In the south, where the Russians had dropped back to the central lines, a furious battle was reported under way for a hill dominating the sector.

Today marked the start of the second year of the war for the Soviet. As the battle for the last remaining bit of Crimea entered its climactic stage, German vessels appeared off Sevastopol, dispatches from the beleaguered city said.

Sporadic fighting was reported continuing on the Kharkov front, 400 miles to the north. The Germans were said to be attempting to restore lines in a sector where they previously had lost four Ukrainian villages but the attack of two companies was reported repulsed.

The Germans besieging Sevastopol already were lodged in the outer defense lines.

The fate of the historic Crimean fortress appeared to be in the balance as the second year of the costly German campaign in Soviet Russia opened but Russia's "Peasant President," Michael Kalinin, found cause to assure his people that "the end of Hitlerism is inevitable."

Contrasts Last Year

Where a year ago the German armies struck against Russia during the night, this year, according to today's mid-day communiqué of the Soviet information bureau, "no significant changes took place at the front" in the hours of darkness.

There were scattered local engagements all along the 2,000-mile front from the Ukraine to the far north, but Russian attention was centered on the roaring battle in the Crimea, now in its 18th day.

It was officially admitted the enemy had succeeded in driving a wedge into the Russian defenses at Sevastopol. The location of this German salient was not given.

Allied Defeat in Libya Likely To Prolong War

British Express Undisguised Anxiety Over Serious Setback at Tobruk.

By DREW MIDDLETON, AP War Correspondent

LONDON, June 22—A military disaster in Libya of such magnitude that it may have blighted the allies' hopes for a second front in Europe this year and prolonged the whole war, was acknowledged by the British today with deep and undisguised anxiety.

All sources agreed that the allies were faced with a crisis. The next few weeks, they said, will decide whether Germany can be beaten in 1942 or 1943 or will be able to fight on for years using the oil of the Middle East and the tin and rubber of the Far East.

If Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel followed up the capture of Tobruk with customary Nazi speed, it was believed that the impending Axis thrust toward the Suez Canal and the road to Iraq would be launched within a month.

Even more than the fall of Tobruk itself, alarm was felt because Rommel's thunderbolt assault on the fortress, once so staunchly held against seven months of siege, showed that the axis possessed a terrible striking power which appeared to have been woefully underestimated.

Humiliating Defeat

The whole British press called the grave setback in Libya a humiliating defeat which would require a titanic effort to offset. The newspapers noted that the reversal developed suddenly after over-confident reports on the wild desert fighting and asked accusingly whether there had been a blunder.

On the basis of information available here, the best qualified observers said Rommel apparently had caught the British flat-footed at Tobruk, maxing such an overwhelming weight of armor that it could not be resisted.

The Mirror, a frequent government critic, declared that the sooner Prime Minister Churchill could get back from the United States "and make a frank and full statement the better."

The Times suggested that the British army on the North African desert needed "radical innovations in tactical method and mechanical design" and some observers predicted a shake-up in Britain's top command.

Admit Situation Grave

This correspondent consulted ranking United States diplomats, allied staff officers and cabinet members of the allied governments in London, and all shared the opinion that the situation in North Africa is the most important and potentially the most dangerous of any facing the United Nations.

Military observers expected that an Egyptian thrust by Rommel would be accompanied by a drive at Ras el Ezzan, a key position in the Egyptian desert, by air-borne infantry and paratroopers in Syria in an effort to pin British armies there and prevent them from reinforcing the Arab imperials in Egypt.

The Egyptian thrust by Rommel would be accompanied by a drive at Ras el Ezzan, a key position in the Egyptian desert, by air-borne infantry and paratroopers in Syria in an effort to pin British armies there and prevent them from reinforcing the Arab imperials in Egypt.

The bulletin gave no new information on developments at Tobruk, saying merely:

"There is no further news from Tobruk, which must be presumed to have fallen."

While some British forces were still operating west of the Egyptian frontier, the whole of Libya was presumably in Axis hands. It was expected here that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel would attempt to capitalize on his successes by striking swiftly at Egypt in the hope of dealing Ritzke's remaining forces a death blow before they could be regrouped.

Thousands Captured

Military quarters here conveyed Axis claims that 25,000 of Ritzke's men had been captured by the combined German-Italian forces.

JAPS LANDING NEAR U. S. BASE

Forces Being Established at Kiska; Cruiser, Transport Hit by Bombers.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 22—Under cover of fog and thick weather, Japanese landing forces have inched along the Aleutian island chain toward Alaska and now are establishing themselves at Kiska, only 585 miles from the United States navy base at Dutch Harbor.

This was disclosed in a communiqué yesterday that told of the bombing of a small force of enemy ships in Kiska harbor. Army fliers reported hitting one unidentifiable craft afire. Firing lasted 15 minutes. No damage or casualties reported.

Eyewitnesses agreed with the army that the firing had been of no effect, but many felt certain they had heard more than one shot.

Hears More Shots

Robert Lucas, associate editor of the Astoria Budget who was awakened by the sound, said, "I hurried upstairs to have a look toward the sea, and heard from 12 to 16 shots. The shells seemed to be landing somewhere with a great thud, but I couldn't tell what the objects were."

Lucas and others also told of seeing flashes from a gun or guns.

No shells landed in Astoria, so far as could be determined from residents in the 30-mile area.

The army's announcement that they felt "North of Seattle" suggested they might have ploved ashore by into some part of the 16 miles of sandy wasteland between the Oregon City and the Columbia river.

If Canadian and American naval units were reported to have launched an immediate hunt for the attacker, presumably a Japanese submarine.

At Tokyo, a naval commentator quoted by Domei gave indirect support to the belief that the attack upon Vancouver Island, at least, was made by a Japanese craft.

See Shock to U. S.

This "must have been a great shock to the United States and Canadian peoples," he said, citing the army's statement of Secretary of War Stimson's statement that the U. S. victories at Midway and in the Coral Sea had lessened the danger of Japanese attack upon the American coast.

The shelling in British Columbia and Oregon were the second and third instances of hostile action against the North American mainland in the start of the year, and the first since February 23.

At 4:30 on that date a large submarine surfaced off Golden Gate, seven miles north of Santa Barbara and fired 25 shells at an oil field and refinery along the coast. One hit was made on an oil well derrick, causing minor damage.

Kenton Sailor Saw Lexington Sent to Bottom

KENTON, June 22—"We gave 'em all we had as long as we had it. Then we jumped off and swam until we were picked up," said Walter Duncan, 22, former Kenton filling station operator, as he returned to this country on leave after a narrow escape in the Coral Sea naval battle that sank his ship, the USS Lexington, an airplane carrier. Duncan was a member of the gun crew and said it was his belief the high ship was rocked by an aerial torpedo which was sent by an explosion of high octane gas fumes in its hold.

TWO ATTACKS REPORTED 24 HOURS APART

Oregon Town Attacked After Enemy Craft Fires on Radio Station in Canada.

By The Associated Press

Submarine shelling of lonely Vancouver Island in Canada's British Columbia and gunfire upon the Oregon coast from an unidentified craft lurking offshore brought war to the doorstep of Canada alert and expectant Pacific north coast.

The two attacks, at points separated by several hundred miles, were about 24 hours apart. Official reports indicated no casualties and little damage at either spot.

First target was a dominion government radio station at Eastvan Point, on the western coast of Vancouver Island. The shelling there began at 10:35 p. m. (Pacific war time) Saturday and continued for a half-hour.

Shells Miss Station

"The shells landed on the beach or on the rocks well beyond the building," said Lieut.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, commander-in-chief of Canadian west coast defenses. "A few windows in the radio office were broken by the concussion."

Then at 11:30 o'clock last night, residents from Seaside on the Oregon coast on the Columbia river, at the northwest tip of Oregon, were awakened by the sound of gunfire and the whine of speeding missiles.

"Six to nine shells landed in the area north of Seaside," the army said in a communiqué from San Francisco, "apparently from an unidentified craft offshore. Firing lasted 15 minutes. No damage or casualties reported."

Eyewitnesses agreed with the army that the firing had been of no effect, but many felt certain they had heard more than one shot.

Katharine Brush Writes of Our Generation's 20 Tinted Years

"The Boy from Maine" Ranked as Popular Author's Best Novel.

By LOIS ZIMMER

A simple statement "So there it was," frequently repeated, becomes a sort of refrain in Katharine Brush's latest novel, "The Boy from Maine." The story is a love story, but it is also a story of the life of a boy who grows up in a small town in Maine, and who, through a series of circumstances, becomes a writer of novels.

KATHARINE BRUSH

Honey Hobey is a poverty-stricken product of New York's Island. Had it not been for his acquaintance with a summer family from Boston's law-abiding Beacon street (he attained that through delivering the washing), he might have remained there. But the circumstances developed by Miss Brush lead him away from the island, through the World War, into a career of entertainment, and finally to prominence in the entertainment world.

Divided into four books, tracing a secondary pattern in the life story of the definitely less admirable heroine, Romie Hastings, daughter of the summer family, Honey's first love and supreme inspiration.

One of the most pleasing portions of the novel, divided into four books corresponding to four phases of the hero's life, is that devoted to presentation of his background of life in the little village of Channel Harbor.

Flashing back from a Broadway introduction which presents Honey as the popular master of ceremonies at Club Europa, he is shown as a boy of nine on his way home from a neighbor's house where he has been sent to borrow a cup of cornstarch. That incident, too, is used to introduce Bonivere Roberts whose mother, complaining that she was clean out of names for girls, had hit upon the name of a cap-shaped, double-meshed hair net in a small order catalog to end the new baby's anonymity. Bonivere grew up to be an over-beautiful, over-developed, over-wise parasite who followed Honey to New York, and created complications.

Miss Brush's delightful talent for observing and describing people continually highlights the novel and at times almost threatens the continuity of the story.

Descriptive Talent Evident There is, for instance, her presentation of Ruby Mallory who took the inexperienced lad from Maine under her motherly wing and altered forever the course of his existence.

Ruby had struck up an acquaintance with Honey in World War days, when he, wandering up-town with several of his pals on shore leave, had paused to study pictures of the talent exhibited at the entrance of a night club. Ruby was the 58-year-old and famous star, but "she was painted young" so he failed to recognize her at first when, observing the young sailor regarding her picture, she changed the "Hello, sailor," she had intended, to "Hello, son."

"She was the dressed fat lady he had seen in quite a while, and his surprised eyes made a little sight-seeing tour, in spite of him. Lace and satin, chains and bracelets, rings and hatpins and a jeweled gold bag, a velvet band around the throat, a hat with veils and roses on it, and real flowers pinned on the shoulder with a whopping diamond pin. She smelled of perfume, too, and wore a six-foot feather boa, and he had just about decided that she must be either an actress—only homely—or a madam—only motherly—when he suddenly discovered the resemblance he had missed. This plain yet fancy face belonged to Ruby Mallory, who was so famous that she should have scared you. Well she didn't. Not a bit."

Hailed As Her Best Work In the style familiar to the many readers of her syndicated weekly column, "Out of My Mind" are frequent paragraphs in which the author builds up a mood with a succession of phrases descriptive of a certain place or time. Familiar long titles, too, are cleverly employed.

Miss Brush has spent the last five years producing this novel, which readers already hail as her best and most ambitious effort. Among successful novels already to her credit are "Night Club," "Young Man of Manhattan," "Red-headed Woman" and "You Go Your Way." Her witty autobiography, "This is On Me," was published recently.

Frankly a tale of her own times and her own generation, Miss Brush's "The Boy from Maine" is a keen analysis of the easy, glittering aftermath of the first World War and the sober, disillusioning prelude of the second, that a majority of her admirers undoubtedly will find themselves reading many of the author's own experiences between the lines.

TEST METHODS AT EDGEWOOD

Officers Check on All New Ways of Fighting incendiary Bombs.

EDGEWOOD ARSENAL, Mo., June 22—(Wide World)—From placement workshops of part-time in nature and from industrial laboratories have come new and better ways to fight incendiary bombs—but the men who ought to know are working to sand and water spray.

Since last summer, chemical warfare school officers have been getting and testing incendiary bomb-fighting ideas from the kitchen laboratories where suggestions came in letters and telegrams. Other ideas, including precious samples of incendiary bombs, were to watch their progress put to trial.

The officers played favorites, even if they were to fight the matter differed from the intention. Working under Brig. Gen. R. L. Avery, commander of the chemical warfare school, the chemist-officers submitted samples to field and laboratory tests.

A Missourian brought coal oil and sand would be just handy for smothering a burning bomb.

When the chemist-officers saw the burning bomb, the coal oil vaporized and the sand fell out of the air. They called that idea.

Others suggested pitch as the perfect antidote for incendiary bombs.

Out dropped the officers to the testing grounds. They ignited a six-inch bomb and let it burn 55 seconds. When they threw the pitch on, it gave off such dense clouds of smoke that a class of men about 70 yards down had to move.

A naval officer suggested sugar might smother fire bombs. But the Edgewood officers found that sugar made a bomb burn with a pretty blue flame—and did little else.

Fear of reprisal fire-bombing raids on the west coast led to an urgent telegram from Los Angeles, asking if beach sand would be O. K. for use in such a raid.

The inquiry was prompted by reports that salt in the sand would give off noxious fumes if it contacted the flaming magnesium.

"There seems to be absolutely no foundation" for the stories, the Edgewood officers replied.

They pointed out that salt was a good magnesium extinguisher and in fact, they found no danger of noxious fumes from a fire bomb if the fire on a life bomb.

On the other hand, the officers said experiments proved that "magnesium" is a dangerous incendiary bomb. It is the worst thing to use on burning magnesium. The U. S. War Department, however, has a list of the school's previous services.

In the first place, he contended, it gave off noxious fumes. Secondly, it makes the bomb burn more vigorously. Thirdly, it spatters the molten magnesium.

Out of the pleasant fields of treatment and experiments showed soap and other uses than washing faces. Of all the soaps tested on burning magnesium, pure soap was the best.

But soap is the chemically pure form is expensive so the officers

The inquiry was prompted by reports that salt in the sand would give off noxious fumes if it contacted the flaming magnesium.

"There seems to be absolutely no foundation" for the stories, the Edgewood officers replied.

They pointed out that salt was a good magnesium extinguisher and in fact, they found no danger of noxious fumes from a fire bomb if the fire on a life bomb.

On the other hand, the officers said experiments proved that "magnesium" is a dangerous incendiary bomb. It is the worst thing to use on burning magnesium. The U. S. War Department, however, has a list of the school's previous services.

In the first place, he contended, it gave off noxious fumes. Secondly, it makes the bomb burn more vigorously. Thirdly, it spatters the molten magnesium.

Out of the pleasant fields of treatment and experiments showed soap and other uses than washing faces. Of all the soaps tested on burning magnesium, pure soap was the best.

But soap is the chemically pure form is expensive so the officers warfare school officers have been getting and testing incendiary bomb-fighting ideas from the kitchen laboratories where suggestions came in letters and telegrams. Other ideas, including precious samples of incendiary bombs, were to watch their progress put to trial.

The officers played favorites, even if they were to fight the matter differed from the intention. Working under Brig. Gen. R. L. Avery, commander of the chemical warfare school, the chemist-officers submitted samples to field and laboratory tests.

A Missourian brought coal oil and sand would be just handy for smothering a burning bomb.

When the chemist-officers saw the burning bomb, the coal oil vaporized and the sand fell out of the air. They called that idea.

Others suggested pitch as the perfect antidote for incendiary bombs.

Out dropped the officers to the testing grounds. They ignited a six-inch bomb and let it burn 55 seconds. When they threw the pitch on, it gave off such dense clouds of smoke that a class of men about 70 yards down had to move.

A naval officer suggested sugar might smother fire bombs. But the Edgewood officers found that sugar made a bomb burn with a pretty blue flame—and did little else.

Fear of reprisal fire-bombing raids on the west coast led to an urgent telegram from Los Angeles, asking if beach sand would be O. K. for use in such a raid.

RHEUMATISM

RELIEVE PAIN IN TEN MINUTES

Dr. J. C. Schmitt, D. O., of Cleveland, Ohio, reports that he has found a new method of relieving rheumatism in ten minutes. He says that he has found a new method of relieving rheumatism in ten minutes. He says that he has found a new method of relieving rheumatism in ten minutes.

Your worn-out rubbers...

SO BRING IN ALL YOUR

SCRAP RUBBER NOW!

Your old rubber is needed for life belts and rafts, for gas masks, tank treads, raincoats and many other things to equip and arm our fighting forces. It is needed for every tank, bomber and battleship we build. America needs every bit of rubber you can spare—needs it now!

Are we going to let our boys down? Not on your life! So search the attic, the cellar, the garage, the barn, the gullies and field, for every scrap of unneeded rubber you can find. And bring it in to any gas station today.

DON'T DELAY! LOOK AGAIN! GET IT IN NOW!

If you've turned in all the rubber at your house, ask your neighbors to search for rubber. Look for rubber where you work; look in trash piles anywhere—at garages, factories, stores, along country roads, under bridges; search community dumps.

There's more scrap rubber yet to be found than has been found. Come on Ohio! America needs it, and time is short!

President Roosevelt has designated all Ohio gas stations as official collection points and set the standard price of 1¢ a pound on scrap rubber. There is no profit for any company helping in the collection.

Gasoline dealers will be reimbursed by the oil companies supplying them, and the rubber will be bought at exactly the same price paid for it by the Rubber Recovery Corp., a new Government unit. All money for donated rubber will go to Army and Navy Relief, the U.S.O. and the Red Cross. Oil companies, with others, will contribute transportation and all costs of picking up and handling, as well as the time of thousands of employees. All scrap rubber collected will be immediately added to our country's vital supply.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE THINGS TO LOOK FOR

When You Attend A Funeral . . .

When you attend a funeral do you note the manner in which services are conducted—and whether professional work has been all that it should be?

It is well to pay some attention to the service that is being given by the funeral director. If you should need such service you would want to know that things would be right.

We invite critical inspection of our work. We do not claim perfection. But we do know that everything possible is done for every funeral entrusted to our care.

Green Camp Rationing Board Makes 63 Grants

GREEN CAMP—Green Camp rationing board Wednesday granted a new tire to Charles Earhart, defense worker, and recipe to Carl Rothfuss farmer. Two applications were rejected.

Sixty-one applications for canning sugar were issued Wednesday by the Green Camp rationing board. They were for 1,621 pounds of sugar. Included were applications of two local grocers for additional sugar to take care of sugar certificates presented. Each grocer was granted 300 pounds.

Because of a drastic shortage of coal the secondary railroads in Sweden are using wood fired locomotives.

The map shows the estimated division of seats in the house of representatives by parties for each section of the country if the congressional election were held at this time. A comparison with the situation in the 1940 election is also shown. Figures for today are based on results of a nationwide Gallup Poll.

House Rule Would Stay Democratic If Vote Were Cast Today, Poll Shows

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., June 22—If the Republicans are going to win control of congress this November, as they did in the wartime election of 1918, they have an uphill road ahead.

Even allowing for a low turnout of voters which has been amply evidenced in recent elections, a fact which works to the advantage of the Republicans, they would still do no better than they did in 1940 if a congressional election were held at this time. In fact, the evidence as of today indicates that the Democrats would actually gain some seats.

The line-up in the house, as estimated by the Institute on the basis of its latest nation-wide poll on political sentiment completed this week, would be as follows if an election were held today:

	1940 Election	Today
Dem. Seats	268	278
Rep. Seats	168	152
Other Party	5	5

It must be borne in mind, however, that the political situation today is colored by favorable war news. At the present time the public is highly satisfied with war production, and cheered by naval and air victories in the Pacific. If such a combination of good news does not exist in November, the Democrats may suffer politically, just as military reverses from time to time increased opposition sentiment in England.

G.O.P. Lacks Issue

Up to the present time the Republicans have failed to find an issue with sufficient appeal to win a sizable part of the independent vote—that bloc of approximately 10,000,000 voters who hold the balance of political power in the United States today.

Lacking such an issue today, the Republicans' best hope lies in the fact that voters this year are taking considerably less interest in elections than at any time in recent years. That is shown by the low turnout in all the primary elections to date.

When turnout is low the Republicans generally benefit. More Republicans than Democrats customarily take the trouble to vote. Since last November, in six age-class elections held to fill house vacancies, the average turnout has been less than 40 per cent of the turnout on regular election days. Republicans made substantial gains in three out of the six elections.

The primaries held thus far tell the same story of low voter turnout. In the three largest states which have held their primaries so far, participation was about 30 per cent below that of the comparable 1938 mid-term primary voting.

Green Camp Grange To Entertain Pomona Group

GREEN CAMP—Arrangements were made by Mrs. Olive Grange Thursday to entertain Pomona Grange on June 27. Mrs. Alice Reynolds and Mrs. Ray Hedges were appointed on the refreshment committee. The grange kitchen orchestra will play. It was announced that on July 2 moving pictures will be shown at the grange meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hedges, Lucille Reynolds and Harold Hedges were appointed a committee in charge of this meeting. Mrs. Edith Schwadener and Mrs. Ruth Ann Lyon were in charge of the program.

About 50 members of the Green Camp and Mr. Olive Methodist churches held a farewell party for Rev. and Mrs. Dale Lambert of the Methodist church.

Green Camp Missionary Society Hears Reports

GREEN CAMP—Mrs. Olive Harmon entertained the Baptist Missionary society Thursday. Mrs. Violet Ganson and Mrs. Ida Schultz were assisting hostesses. Mrs. Mildred Johnston read a poem and led in prayer. Mrs. Nina Weston announced that the society had several new books available for reading. Mrs. Grace Weston, White Cross chairman, received notice that pillows, sheets, wash cloths and towels are to be omitted from future overseas shipments, but that surgical supplies were needed.

Mrs. Donna Ruth Jones, who was in charge of the program, told the story of the hymn, "My Faith Looks Up To Thee." Papers on faith were given by Mrs. Violet Ganson, Mrs. Arnelida Dreyer, Mrs. Edith Welch, Mrs. Mildred Johnston, Mrs. Nina Weston and Mrs. Jones. A report on the recent house party at Granville was given by Mrs. Claire Porter. Guests were Mrs. Lucille Rosebrow, Mrs. Jennie Gauding and Mrs. Garnette Shepard.

Party Line-Up in House Since 1932

The following table shows the division of seats by parties in the house of representatives since 1932, with an estimate of the division if the congressional election were held at this time:

	1932	1936	1940	Today
Dem.	318	322	334	278
Rep. Other	117	103	89	152
	5	10	12	5

The most recent voting, held in Maine last Monday, showed a turnout one-third below normal in the First District, where the principal primary battle was fought.

Consequently, as of today any estimate of party strength must take full account of the apathy factor. With a normal turnout, Democratic gains would be substantially larger, as indicated in the Institute's report of five weeks ago, which showed an estimated Democratic gain of 38 seats if election had been held at that time.

Gains in Mid-West

The Democrats would show the greatest gains in an election today in the East Central section as a whole, composed of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. There the party would show an estimated increase of 13 seats over 1940.

The Democrats would make the poorest showing in the New England and Middle Atlantic states where, according to today's estimate, they would lose a total of seven seats.

The total net gain for the Democrats throughout the country would be 10 seats. No slight gain would come about as a result of shifts from G.O.P. Indications are that at least three seats would be added to the Democratic total because of reapportionment based on the 1940 population census.

The composite political picture, section by section, based on probable results if an election were held at this time, is shown in the table below:

Other Party	Net Change From 1940	1940	Today
New England	10	13	—
Middle Atlantic	58	46	1
East Central	45	31	1

NOTICE... AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE

The Director of Defense Transportation has issued a General Order curtailing local delivery services as a means of conserving transportation facilities and equipment. We are obliged by Government Order to make further reduction in our total mileage by 25 per cent and for your information we quote from General Order O.D.T. No. 6, which imposes the following restrictions:

- 1—There Can Be Only One Regular Delivery A Day...
- 2—There Can Be No Callbacks...
- 3—There Can Be No Special Deliveries To Any One, Anytime...

We therefore recommend that all telephone calls be placed at least the day before you desire service. That all work must be paid for on delivery as Routemen are not allowed to call back for collection.

These additional restrictions plus the increased volume of work in this defense area will mean slower service than we have been accustomed to render in the past, but we trust the public will bear with us in our effort to do our part to help win the war.

They Cover the War Fronts

A group of reporters in London, England, are covering the war front. They are covering the war front. They are covering the war front. They are covering the war front. They are covering the war front.

During the first months of the war, the reporters were in London. They were in London. They were in London. They were in London. They were in London.

Several years on southern newspapers followed — managing editor of the Press (Tenn.-Va.), Bulletin, telegraph editor of the Lynchburg (Va.) News and editor of the Fort Smith (Ark.) Southwest American and reporter for the Asheville (N. C.) Times. He joined the Associated Press at Atlanta, Ga., in March, 1931.

ROBERT E. BUNNELLE

When I started out with you I've got to be sure that everything on the desk is wiped out. "Oh."

"Something happened in South America I had a little trouble." "You told me," Della said. "And I told you I didn't care."

She waited. The fear was still with her, gathering into a tight little knot inside. But she was calm now and strangely hurt because she would not quite understand the still small voice that kept hinting at something she dared not express. This woman Perry Clarke had mentioned—Hector Losado. Suppose that she—

She shook the thought aside. "So it's just your pride that's most important after all," she said finally, her voice cool and even. "We're quarreling, Ward. And we shouldn't. Don't you think so?"

But she had opened the door and was on the sidewalk. He caught up with her at the apartment house entrance and she turned, one hand on the door-pull.

"I'm sorry, darling," she said. "Good night. I had a lovely evening."

He looked at her, his blue eyes miserable and his mouth twisted. "Good night, Dee," he said.

That was all. He made no move towards her and she, who had so wanted to comfort him had given her the chance, turned quickly and went inside, eyes humming as she hurried up the stairs.

Drink With Hector. Joyce Murdock was combing out her hair when she heard the door open in the living room. She had about finished at the dressing table and was tying a yellow ribbon about her head when her husband entered, trailing smoke from a freshly-lighted pipe.

"Hello," he said. "Have a good time?"

"Very nice," Joyce said. "How's the expectant father?"

"Still expecting the last I heard."

Kent Murdock bent down to kiss her and grinned. "You look cute," he said.

"Do?"

"With that ribbon in your hair?" Joyce remained at the table, idly neatening things that hardly needed such attention. "We waited for you," she said presently.

"I'm sorry. I got tied up."

She followed him with her eyes as he took off his coat and vest and began to empty things from his pockets to the top of the chest. He did all this slowly, rather absently, a frown biting at the bridge of his nose.

thoughtful, faraway look in his dark eyes. Recognizing the signs, she knew something was bothering him.

He was just a newspaper photographer then—he still was, although he now was picture chief for the Courier-Herald and had more time for outside interests—but even so he measured up to the man she'd had in the back of her mind since childhood.

She resumed her hair, he had slipped into his pajamas and was standing there, his eyes quizzical. She smiled at him.

DONNA M. ROWLAND DIES IN HOSPITAL

Funeral of 13-Year-Old Girl To Be Tuesday.

Donna Marie Rowland, 13, daughter of Mrs. and Mr. Perry Rowland of 232 North Prospect street, died at City hospital at 2 p. m. yesterday following an abdominal operation in the morning. She had been ill three days.

She was born in Marion on Sept. 25, 1928, to Perry and Minnie Ruth Rowland, and was a member of the Prospect Street Methodist church. She attended Central Junior high school where she would have been in the ninth grade next year.

Surviving are three brothers and a sister.

When he had finished with his pockets, he stood there a lean, moderately tall man with crisp, dark hair and strong brows. His weight, well distributed along his flat-muscled body, gave an impression of poise and physical fitness, and there was a nice taper from shoulders to hips. His brows were bent now and the apple, clamped firmly in his wide mouth, warned the said angular jaw.

Presently he removed the pipe, shook out some ashes and came over to the chaise-longue.

"How was the play?" "Very good," Joyce said. "It's a shame you couldn't make it."

"Yes," Murdock said absently. "You must have been awfully busy."

"Yes—I was."

Joyce turned slightly, crossing her knees. She picked up an orange stick and idly fooled with her nails, keeping one eye on her husband's face. She saw the frown deepening. His gaze traveled all over the room—taking care to miss her—and he tapped the pipe stem against his teeth. Whatever it was that bothered him was coming to the surface, and she began to hum softly until she heard him clear his throat.

"Hector's in town."

"Who?"

"Hector. You know—"

"Oh, yes. I knew she was."

He looked at her sharply. "Knew she was what?"

"Why—that she was in town. We met husband number two in Hugo's."

"Oh," Murdock said, and looked vaguely troubled as he listened to his wife's account of the meeting.

Joyce kept busy with her orange stick after she had finished. She knew there was more to come. He was fidgeting now, but she did not help him out and presently he spoke again, his eyes still avoiding her.

"She called me up."

"Did she? Wasn't that nice of her?"

He looked up quickly, dark eyes suspicious, but Joyce was busy with her nails.

"I had a drink with her," he said abruptly, and rose and went to the other side of the room, where he began to undress.

Joyce put down the orange stick.

"Is that why you couldn't meet us after the show?"

"She kept after me," Murdock said. "She called me up and said she understood I was doing some portrait work now and how about doing some of her. I told her I'd think it over—"

"But why?" Joyce was smiling. "Apparently she can pay about any price you want to ask and—"

"Now wait a minute," Murdock said. "Let me tell it all you."

He stopped to look at her, a grin at the corners of his mouth and embarrassment in his eyes. She called me up. She said she wanted to see me and I said—well, you know how it is—

"Of course I do," said Joyce sweetly.

"Will you stop that?" Murdock growled, then, good-naturedly: "I said I'd like to see her but that I was busy, and she said all right, then she'd come to the office."

Well, that wouldn't have been so good, would it? So I said okay. I'd have a drink with her later."

He looked around to see if she was believing him and she nodded and said: "And what was she like?"

He told her with a masculine lack of detail and she sat there watching him and thinking of many things. She was grateful for his honesty, but, looking back, she realized that it had always been this way. Even from the first she had known that this man would be completely honest with himself, and because of this, honest with her.

He was just a newspaper photographer then—he still was, although he now was picture chief for the Courier-Herald and had more time for outside interests—but even so he measured up to the man she'd had in the back of her mind since childhood.

She resumed her hair, he had slipped into his pajamas and was standing there, his eyes quizzical. She smiled at him.

OHIO'S GIN SUPPLY NEARLY EXHAUSTED

Likely To Reduce Liquor Revenue by $3,000,000.

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, O., June 22—Ohio's gin is just about gone, and there isn't going to be any more until—

Liquor Director Jacob B. Taylor said today stocks in state liquor stores likely would be exhausted within a month and in view of government restrictions on use of 190-proof alcohol no more gin could be noted until after the war.

Winsky supplies are ample, however, Taylor said, even if distilleries should be forced to stop production, they have sufficient supplies for five or six years.

"But if the war should last 10 years," Taylor remarked, "we'd all have to walk the straight and narrow."

Elimination of gin sales likely will reduce the state's liquor revenue about 7 per cent, or upward.

A Payment Plan Which Meets Your Requirements

The only kind of a dividend payment plan which really works, in our opinion, is one which exactly meets the requirements of the family using it.

Since this means that the plan should be arranged by the family, rather than us, our policy is simply to let the family tell us how they wish to pay.

It's a simple plan, and a friendly plan, and it really works out WELL. Use it without any additional cost, if it's more convenient!

what is America Fighting For?

Fair Trial by Jury...

(One of the Essentials of a Democracy)

In America the everyday common right of all men is the right to a fair trial by a fair jury.

Fair trial by jury is the insurance we have on our lives, liberties, and our property. That's why jury trial is one of the essentials of a Democracy.

On this firm foundation of justice has flourished our nation where a man has the right to work and save, and build for the future—and enjoy the fruits of his labor, with full confidence that his rights will be protected.

In such an atmosphere of freedom and justice man can create effective tools for war as well as for peace. That's why our tools of war are streaming ceaselessly to help America win through... to Victory!

DEAR GENERAL MAC ARTHUR:

I got something I want to tell you. It's like this—I just paid the second installment on my income tax. General, that sure took a slice out of my income.

And I said to myself, "Now these guys want me to buy War Bonds, too. They want me to pledge 10% of my income. Who do they think I am, Old Goldbucks himself?"

"This tax, that's enough," I said. "I've done my part."

Then, General, I happened to see a picture of you. And I thought about the boys of Bataan. They paid their installment. But then they went right over to Corregidor, and they paid some more. And they kept right on paying up to the end. In blood.

What kind of a guy would I be, thinking income tax is enough? Feeding myself on the hooey that I'd done my part?

General, I've just begun to fight and to give.

Funny part of it is, I haven't even been asked to give anything. All they want is for me to lend them some dough—they pay me interest on it—2.9%, higher than any other Government security today.

Me give up just because the income tax collector took a lot of my hard coin? Not me, General!

Listen. Count on me. Count on me to buy War Bonds and more War Bonds and MORE War Bonds. Count on me for 10% of my salary. Because I'm counting on you to push those Japs right back where they came from and then some. And I don't want it said that you lacked equipment, or ships to get the equipment to you, because I failed to take advantage of a good investment.

Ten years from now, for every $18.75 I put in, I'm going to get twenty-five bucks worth of security for me and the wife and the kids. Me fail to buy War Bonds? Not on your life, General!

And not on the life of any of the guys you have over there with you!

Scrap Rubber Goes to War

Reclaiming Process Is Not New but It's Far More Important Now Than Ever.

Scrap rubber is a material of great importance in the war effort. It is a material that is being reclaimed and used in a variety of ways. The process of reclaiming scrap rubber is not new, but it is far more important now than ever. The process involves the collection of scrap rubber from various sources, including old tires, and its subsequent processing into a usable form. This reclaimed rubber is then used in a variety of ways, including the production of new tires, the manufacture of other rubber products, and the use of the rubber in the war effort. The importance of scrap rubber in the war effort is due to the fact that it is a material that is essential for the production of many of the items that are needed for the war. Without scrap rubber, the production of these items would be greatly hampered, and the war effort would be significantly weakened. Therefore, the reclaiming of scrap rubber is a process that is of great importance to the war effort, and it is one that should be given the highest priority.

WHY ARMY NEEDS YOUR SCRAP RUBBER

The army needs your scrap rubber for a variety of reasons. First, it is a material that is essential for the production of many of the items that are needed for the war. Without scrap rubber, the production of these items would be greatly hampered, and the war effort would be significantly weakened. Therefore, the reclaiming of scrap rubber is a process that is of great importance to the war effort, and it is one that should be given the highest priority.

rubber you have contributed to the war effort. When enough of it is collected, it is sent to a plant where it is reclaimed. The process involves the collection of scrap rubber from various sources, including old tires, and its subsequent processing into a usable form. This reclaimed rubber is then used in a variety of ways, including the production of new tires, the manufacture of other rubber products, and the use of the rubber in the war effort.

Let us assume that among the rubber scrap which you contributed was one almost gone tire—the tire you told yourself "might come in handy" although you knew better right along. This tire passes into the plant and on to what is called a "de-banding" machine which strips the beads from its surface. The "scalped" tire then is ground. It passes through rollers, past rapidly rotating knives, which cut it up into minute particles just as your teeth prepare food for your stomach. This ground up scrap rubber is "digested" under pressure by means of caustic soda. The caustic soda constitutes the "digestive juices" and the stomachs of the reclaiming plant are steam-jacketed autoclaves equipped with devices which stir the caustic soda into a "meal" of from two to four tons of ground up tire scrap. The caustic soda, together with certain oils, acts on the scrap rubber while at the same time high tem-forces which completed occupation of Tobruk yesterday. There was no denial either of official reports from Berlin that German troops had pushed on from Tobruk to capture B. El Gobi, a direct track center 40 miles to the southeast, and the port of Bardia, only eight miles from the Egyptian border. Military quarters here were vague as to the factors accounting for the fall of Tobruk, but it appeared the British had lost such a large proportion of their armored strength in the savage desert fighting which preceded the final assault that they were unable to offer effective resistance. Dispatches from the front gave no indication of any attempt to remove the Tobruk garrison by sea during the furious 24-hour battle that ended in its fall. It seemed probable that in addition to large numbers of prisoners, most of the equipment which the British conveyed to Tobruk only a few days ago at great cost had fallen into Axis hands, for events moved so rapidly that complete destruction of stores would have been impossible. While the portion of Ritchie's forces which escaped this debacle was said to be holding strong positions along the Egyptian frontier, there was no dispute on hand to minimize the seriousness of the situation. Vital Port The fall of Tobruk, which the British had held since Jan. 22, 1941, and which had withstood seven-month siege last year, gives Rommel an important supply port close to the Egyptian frontier and thereby vastly improves his chances for a successful thrust toward Suez. Military quarters here said Rommel might find it difficult to move supplies through Tobruk as long as Allied air forces can contest control of the skies. It was presumed, however, that the Axis leader would hasten to concentrate strong fighter plane forces at nearby El Adem and other desert airports to protect his overseas supply line. Despite the set-back in Libya, the city of Alexandria—some 300 miles east of the frontier—was calm today and there was no outward sign of change in the situation facing the country, which is not yet formally at war with the Axis. Egypt's well-trained army of 40,000 regulars, augmented by 100,000 guardsmen, is ready for action, however, and actually is performing valuable service in support of the British by patrolling vast stretches of the western desert. The official position of the government, pledged to give Britain all aid short of war, is that it will not make any declaration against the Axis powers unless invaded.
